

Bernard Headley holds a Ph.D. in Sociology from Howard University, Washington, D.C. He is Professor Emeritus of Justice Studies, Northeastern Illinois University, Chicago (USA) and retired Professor of Criminology, University of the West Indies, Mona. A twice awarded U.S. Senior Fulbright Scholar to Jamaica, he is author of several scholarly articles and books on race and crime, and matters relating to the Jamaican Diaspora. His present interest is in creating restorative communities and building transformed lives among Jamaica's criminally at-risk.